

Bring it all together with a unified home for work

Working across multiple tools is often manual and gets in the way of the flow of your work. Dropbox and Google Cloud are partnering to solve this problem by bringing all of your work together.

With the Dropbox add-on for Gmail, you can:

- View, save, and share any Dropbox file—big or small, including photos, videos, presentations, docs, project work, and more—from the Dropbox add on in Gmail
- Preview, comment on, and share Dropbox files in Gmail before choosing to download
- Easily find and sync your Dropbox files in Gmail anytime, on any browser or device

Note: Chrome users can also save and share Dropbox files through the Chrome extension

Easily access Dropbox with G Suite Single Sign On:

- Sign into Dropbox with G Suite single sign on, allowing users to seamlessly connect their accounts and providing team admins with more control and visibility
- Easily turn on enterprise-class, single sign-on access via oAuth 2.0 or SAML 2.0 authentication methods

Coming soon:

- Create, open, edit, save, and share Google Docs, Sheets, and Slides directly from Dropbox, and save Google files to your Dropbox account
- Access to a native integration with Google Hangouts, so users can select files from their Dropbox account and send links directly from Hangouts
